Abstract

An example document showing how easy it is to use this class to produce USENIX documents.

1   A 12 pt bold section heading

Standard 10 pt text. Note that instead of footnotes, `\footnote` produces an endnote when using the `footasend` class option.[1]

1.1   An 11 pt bold subsection heading

Does this conform to USENIX's style? Who knows, it sure looks better than making the sizes the same! The style file for 2005 seems to indicate that smaller is okay.[2]

1.1.1   A 10 pt bold subsubsection heading
